

MSAD # 33 Guiding Principles & Habits of Mind Crosswalk

While many HOMs can connect to the individual GPs, the ones in the crosswalk are those that are most critical to the GP in regards to assessment.

MLR Guiding Principle	Corresponding HOM (s)
A. A clear and effective communicator who uses a variety of modes of expression (spoken, written, and visual and performing including the use of technology to create and share the expressions)	Thinking & communicating with clarity & precision  Thinking about your thinking
B. A self-directed and lifelong learner who demonstrates reliability and concern for quality	Striving for accuracy  Responding with wonderment and awe  Remaining open to continuous learning
C. A creative and practical problem solver who perseveres in challenging situations	Persisting  Thinking flexibly  Creating, imagining, and innovating  Finding Humor
D. A responsible and involved citizen who accepts responsibility for personal decisions and actions	Managing impulsivity  Taking responsible risks  Thinking interdependently
E. An integrative and informed thinker who gains and applies knowledge across disciplines and learning contexts and to real life situations with and without technology	Questioning & posing problems  Applying past knowledge to new situations  Listening with understanding and empathy  Gathering data through all senses

Options for use: Teachers can choose and focus on "Power HOMs" or choose and use HOMs applicable to each lesson.